REBELLIOUS INK · TATTOO & PIERCING STUDIO

Apprentice training offer

Dear apprentice,

Thanks for coming in to talk to us. Here is what we are offering, so you have it in writing and can think it over properly.

A training place, not a job. This is an unpaid apprenticeship. We do not pay you and we do not charge you a fee. You are here to learn to tattoo safely and well, under a named supervising artist, and to build the record that gets you signed off as a junior artist.

What we give you

- A named supervising artist who is responsible for your training, and the rest of the team to learn from.
- A structured programme with 118 skills in six stages: prerequisites, then safety, cleaning, front of house and drawing; deeper hygiene, observation, set-ups and stencils; basic tattooing, machines and bedside manner; intermediate tattooing and running your own work; and completion. You can see every skill, its stage and what counts as evidence in the app.
- Your own login to the studio app with My training: log your hours, add progression photos, and tick skills as ready for review. Your supervisor verifies hours and signs skills off, so you always know where you stand.
- Practice skins, standard black ink and the studio's basic consumables for practice and supervised work, at no cost to you.
- Observation of real sessions with our artists, with the client's agreement.
- Supervised work on clients when your supervisor says you are ready, on simple pieces from our flash catalogue at the apprentice price. We will agree separately, in writing, how that work is paid for before it starts.
- Help with your council registration when the time comes, and advice on insurance, kit and the things nobody tells you.
- A clear finish line: 500 verified hours and every core skill signed off, then a written sign-off as a junior artist and the offer of a resident place on a commission split.

What we ask of you

- Come in on the days we agree together and tell us if you cannot. There is no minimum number of hours a week; the programme is paced by your progress, not the clock.
- Keep your training record honest and up to date in the app.
- Follow the studio's hygiene and infection-control procedures to the letter. Everything on the premises is covered by the council registration, so this is not optional for anyone.
- Draw. Most of the first stage is drawing, and it never stops.

- Treat clients, the team and the space with respect, and keep client details private.
- Bring your own drawing materials and, from stage three, your own machine and power supply; we will help you choose.

Money, plainly

- No wage, no fee, no deposit.
- Any supervised client work you do is agreed and paid for separately, in writing, before it happens. Until then you are training, not working.
- You do not pay for practice materials or standard consumables. Specialist needles or sizes you want for your own practice are yours to buy.
- Travel, food and your own kit are your own costs.
- Nothing here stops you earning elsewhere.

How it ends

Either of us can end the training with a week's notice, in writing, with no fee or penalty either way. When you are signed off as a junior artist, we will talk about a resident place and the split that goes with it.

If you are happy with this, we will set you up on the system, introduce you to your supervisor, and start on the prerequisites together. Ask us anything first.
